

This bachelor's thesis on "Comprehensive treatment of the central developmental hypotonic syndrome" explains the concept, describes its causes but also further development. It discusses the problems of hypotonic children with their associated health problems. It summarizes and describes the work of individual disciplines required for treating children. Points to the need for cooperation fields.